Plastic Free By the Sea BYOB

A century ago grocers did not provide bags (paper or plastic) for customers. Customers were responsible for bringing a sack or basket with them in which to carry their purchases. Then in the 1950s supermarkets came into being and store owners wanted to offer as many conveniences as possible to their customers. One of the conveniences they offered was grocery bags. By providing bags, customers didn't have to remember to bring their own. Consumers got used to this, and for decades very few people brought their own bags. But now we are aware of the pollution caused to manufacture bags, the increase in waste and litter, the fact that plastic doesn't biodegrade, and of the chemicals in plastics that leach into the environment and that animals and we humans ingest. Bringing our own bags is the responsible thing to do. We really do need to remember, as our ancestors did, to bring our own bags. Please Bring Your Own Bags wherever you shop. Be responsible. BYOB.
